

NEWS BRIEFS

Starwood, Anya Hindmarch, Lanvin and Gucci – Live news

October 29, 2015

Illustration of Lanvin's Alber Elbaz

By STAFF REPORTS

Luxury Daily's live news from Oct. 28:

David Yurman streamlines its rings into engagement planning

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

U.S. jeweler David Yurman is emphasizing the story surrounding a marriage proposal to keep its engagement rings top of mind.

Click here to read the entire article

Rumors of Chinese purchase drive Starwood stock prices up

Starwood Hotels & Resorts Worldwide Inc. may soon be bought by a Chinese firm.

Click here to read the entire article

Anya Hindmarch makes Middle Eastern retail a priority

British accessories label Anya Hindmarch has entered a franchise agreement with Etoile Group to establish a retail footprint in the Middle East.

Click here to read the entire article

Alber Elbaz departs from Lanvin

Alber Elbaz, creative director of Lanvin, is the latest designer to step down from his position at a top luxury house.

Click here to read the entire article

Gucci's new motifs retold to show modernity

Italian fashion label Gucci is asking online talents to repurpose its latest print motifs into artwork.

Click here to read the entire article