

The News and Intelligence You Need on Luxury

NEWS BRIEFS

Japan, Barneys, LVMH and Mercedes-Benz – News briefs

September 29, 2016

Image courtesy of Barneys

By STAFF REPORTS

Japan's luxury sector boosted by Chinese tourists

For those who spend a lot of their time between the jewellery boutiques and the haute couture stores of Tokyo's Ginza district, a new joke suggests an easy way to tell local Japanese from the Chinese tourists, reports the Financial Times.

Click here to read the entire article on the Financial Times

Barneys prepared to ride out storm at Perry Capital

Though Perry Capital is a sinking ship, that's not the case with its luxury retail asset held in the portfolio, Barneys New York, according to Barneys executives, per Women's Wear Daily.

Click here to read the entire article on Women's Wear Daily

Two LVMH employees detained in probe of security consultant

French police this week detained for questioning two employees of luxury goods maker LVMH Mot Hennessy Louis Vuitton in connection with a probe of a security consultant who is suspected by investigators of trafficking in sensitive law-enforcement information, according to the Wall Street Journal.

Click here to read the entire article on the Wall Street Journal

How Mercedes-AMG wraps drivers in sensual luxury

The designers at Mercedes-Benz start every project with two questions, says Gorden Wag ener, head of design for parent company Daimler: "Is it cool? And is it hot?" Cool as in high tech; hot as in sensual, says Wired.

Click here to read the entire article on Wired

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.