

NEWS BRIEFS

Gucci, Abu Issa Holding, handbags and James Galanos – News briefs

November 1, 2016

The Gucci Garden print

By STAFF REPORTS

Today in luxury marketing:

Pinault: It's just the beginning of Alessandro's Gucci

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save \$246 ▶

Alessandro Michele's Gucci reign has, so far, been laden with success, but if we thought we had seen it all, Kering CEO Francois-Henri Pinault has insisted the Italian designer has plenty more up his sleeve, says British Vogue.

Click here to read the entire article on British Vogue

Qatar's Abu Issa Holding to enter Iran retail market in 2017

Abu Issa Holding, one of the largest retail and luxury goods firms in the Middle East, plans to expand into Iran next year and open stores in Tehran selling watches and confectionery as the market opens up after sanctions, according to Reuters.

Click here to read the entire article on Reuters

Handbag sellers slashing their lineups as luxury demand wanes

The handbag industry, rocked by slowing department-store traffic and a shift away from purses by millennials, has a new mantra this holiday season: Do more with less, per Bloomberg.

Click here to read the entire article on Bloomberg

James Galanos, fashion designer for the elite, dies at 92

James Galanos, a fashion designer who spent decades dressing America's social elite, most notably Nancy Reagan, died on Oct. 30 at his home in West Hollywood, CA. He was 92, reports the New York Times.

Click here to read the entire article on the New York Times

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.