

NEWS BRIEFS

Kering, Tesla, Furla and the art market – News briefs

March 29, 2017

Furla's 1920s Charleston Metropolis for its 90th anniversary

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Today in luxury marketing:

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Luxury giant Kering may be shuffling retail real estate deck

It's been more than a year since Gucci closed its doors at 840 Madison Avenue here and parent Kering still hasn't divulged its plans for the 10,298-square-foot space. Gucci holds the lease and has the right to sublet through September 2018, according to real estate sources speaking with WWD.

Click here to read the entire article on WWD

Tesla stock rises as China's Tencent invests

Chinese Internet services company Tencent Holdings has purchased a stake in electric car giant Tesla, reports Barron's.

Click here to read the entire article on Barron's

Furla appoints Camerlengo as CEO

Italian premium accessories group Furla has promoted Alberto Camerlengo to the position of CEO after six years with the company, according to The Industry London.

Click here to read the entire article on The Industry London

What's in the numbers? Expert opinions differ on art market performance, but does it matter?

Usually there is just one comprehensive report on the art and antiques market every year, produced in March by TEFAF (The European Fine Art Fair in Maastricht), the biggest and widest ranging quality fair for art and antiques in the world, per The Telegraph.

Click here to read the entire article on The Telegraph

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.