

NEWS BRIEFS

Watchmakers, Saks, Tiffany and Tesla – News briefs

May 15, 2017

Cartier's Drive de Cartier timepiece

---

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Sign up now

Luxury Daily

Today in luxury marketing:

Luxury watchmakers must get with the technological times

Out with English noblemen; in with techies and women. Sweeping board and management changes say more about the risks facing Cartier-owner Richemont and other luxury groups than an underwhelming quarter for watch sales, according to the Wall Street Journal.

Click here to read the entire article on the Wall Street Journal

Saks owner Hudson's Bay shares drop on disappointing sales data

Shares of Hudson's Bay Co., the owner of luxury department store chain Saks Fifth Avenue, slumped more than 6 percent on May 12 after the retailer reported disappointing quarterly same-store sales, reports Reuters.

Click here to read the entire article on Reuters

Tiffany draws fire for board stacked with 70-ish white men

Tiffany & Co., the luxury-jewelry company that's suffering from declining sales, is now facing criticism for a board marked by long tenures and a lack of diversity, per Bloomberg.

Click here to read the entire article on Bloomberg

Tesla is screwed once luxury carmakers start building real electric cars

Have you ever sat in a new Tesla? It feels like something from Star Trek. Not in the traditional "Holy crap, I'm driving the future" sense; more in the sense that it feels like a vehicle from a world where traditional standards of wealth have been abolished, and luxury goods have lost cache in favor of technological advancement, says The Drive.

Click here to read the entire article on The Drive

---

© Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.