

NEWS BRIEFS

Saint Laurent, Iran, Bernard Arnault and self-driving cars – News briefs

June 20, 2017

Saint Laurent is expecting its sales to increase. Image credit: Saint Laurent

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Today in luxury:

Kering's Yves Saint Laurent expects to double sales in mid-term

Yves Saint Laurent, French luxury group Kering's second-biggest brand, expects to nearly double revenue in three to five years while boosting profits, adding to its recent strong growth, the company said on June 19, reports Reuters.

Click here to read the entire article on Reuters

Iran's hoped-for boom has gone bust for fashion brands

When Iranians reelected the reformist Hassan Rouhani as their president last month, it was a huge relief for Farshid Jamali, the businessman behind the Iranian outposts of Italian fashion brands Versace and Roberto Cavalli, according to Women's Wear Daily.

Click here to read the entire article on Women's Wear Daily

Arnault bullish on Macron reforms despite fears over economy

French luxury tycoon Bernard Arnault is optimistic about the country's new president, but he's worried about the global economy, per Bloomberg.

Click here to read the entire article on Bloomberg

Your next car may be a living room on wheels

Imagine rearranging the seats in your car to watch a movie on a big screen in the dashboard. Or controlling functions like air conditioning by touching the window. Or replacing rearview mirrors with cameras that give you a live-action look at the surrounding traffic, says the Wall Street Journal.

Click here to read the entire article on the Wall Street Journal

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.