

NEWS BRIEFS

Burberry, Marc Jacobs, gender stereotypes and Porsche – News briefs

July 19, 2017

Marc Jacobs' spring/summer 2017 campaign. Image credit: Marc Jacobs

By STAFF REPORTS

Today in luxury:

Burberry to pay \$2.54M after stiffing workers on overtime

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

That's a lot of purses. Luxury retailer Burberry has agreed to fork over a total of $2.54 million to several hundred of its workers for stiffing them on overtime, according to a deal struck between the luxury-goods maker and the employees' lawyers, per The New York Post.

Click here to read the entire article on The New York Post

LVMH confirms Eric Marechalle as CEO of Marc Jacobs

LVMH Mot Hennessy Louis Vuitton said Eric Marechalle is to leave Kenzo and become the chief executive officer of Marc Jacobs International in the third quarter of the year, reports WWD.

Click here to read the entire article on WWD

Advertising watchdog to get tough on gender stereotypes

Advertisements that show men failing at simple household tasks and women left to clean up are set to be banned by the United Kingdom advertising watchdog, says BBC.

Click here to read the entire article on BBC

Porsche may ditch diesel engine

Porsche will decide at the end of the decade whether its latest generation of diesel engines will be its last, CEO Oliver Blume told Reuters, the first time a German carmaker has said in public it could discontinue, reports Automotive News.

Click here to read the entire article on Automotive News

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.