

NEWS BRIEFS

M&As, Coach, Maserati and Boeing 777 – News briefs

August 16, 2017

Should LVMH sell the struggling Marc Jacobs? Image credit: Marc Jacobs, fall/winter 2017

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Today in luxury:

Optimizing a luxury portfolio must be about buying and selling

As M&A ramps up, the industry is awash with talk about which brands the big groups should buy. But which ones should they sell? asks Business of Fashion.

Click here to read the entire article on Business of Fashion

Coach has become a luxury brand again but Wall Street wants more

Profits at Coach, the high-end handbag company, nearly doubled in the most recent quarter, to $152 million, as part of the company's aggressive turnaround efforts, says The Washington Post.

Click here to read the entire article on The Washington Post

Marchionne's Maserati spinoff lacks traction

Fiat Chrysler boss Sergio Marchionne has a knack for buying and selling car brands at the right time. He snapped up Chrysler on the cheap in 2009, and spun off Ferrari six years later to create one of the world's most richly-valued auto stocks. Alfa Romeo and Maserati would stretch even his dealmaking skills, per Reuters.

Click here to read the entire article on Reuters

Plenty of legroom on Boeing's luxury jet tailored for the world's richest

On commercial airlines today, traveling in coach is a pain, while the wealthy are well looked after in first class. But for the ultrawealthy, there's a whole other level available, according to The Chicago Tribune.

Click here to read the entire article on The Chicago Tribune

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.