NEWS BRIEFS

Louis Vuitton, YNAP, Miu Miu and Tesla – News briefs

August 28, 2017

Louis Vuitton Series 6 ad campaign. Image credit: Louis Vuitton

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Today in luxury:

Vuitton knows fashion is a money pitand keeps throwing money in it

It's been a banner year for clothing at Louis Vuitton. Shoppers queuing for a streetwear collection developed with the cult New York brand Supreme; red-carpet appearances by actresses Michelle Williams and Isabelle Huppert wearing the brand; runway shows by star designer Nicolas Ghesquire at dramatic venues including the Louvre and the Miho Museum in Japan. All of this has pushed Louis Vuitton's apparel business into the spotlight, according to Bloomberg.

Click here to read the entire article on Bloomberg

Want to be the next Coco Chanel? Become a coder

Eager to know what the next big thing in luxury will be? I am utterly convinced that digital talent will be as important to fashion and luxury as design talent, per the Financial Times.

Click here to read the entire article on the Financial Times

Miu Miu pulls "offensive" yellow star clothing after complaints

A high-end fashion line owned by Prada says it's pulling clothes that feature yellow star patches some critics say resemble the Stars of David Jews were forced to wear during the Holocaust, says Business of Fashion.

Click here to read the entire article on Business of Fashion

Tesla's push to build a self-driving car sparked dissent among its engineers

Tesla Inc. chief executive Elon Musk jolted the automotive world last year when he announced the company's new vehicles would come with a hardware upgrade that would eventually allow them to drive themselves, reports the Wall Street Journal.

Click here to read the Wall Street Journal

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.