NEWS BRIEFS

Harrods, Bitcoin, fashion magazines and Trump – News briefs

August 29, 2017

Harrods' facade. Image credit: Harrods

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Today in luxury:

CEO Talks: Michael Ward, Harrods' managing director, on his vision for the retailer

Before Michael Ward arrived at Harrods, management was one big merry-go-round under the mercurial, controversial and ever-colorful Mohamed Al Fayed, who eventually sold the store to Qatar Holding LLC, the investment company linked to the royal family of the Gulf state, for $2.22 billion, according to Women's Wear Daily.

Click here to read the entire article on Women's Wear Daily

How Bitcoin is making waves in the luxury market

When Bitcoin and a subsequent raft of cryptocurrencies first landed in the early part of the decade, many people – including noted economists and finance experts – dismissed them as a fad, says CNN.

Click here to read the entire article on CNN

The problem with "full look" styling in fashion magazines

Once upon a time, stylists or sittings editors, as they were once known were largely anonymous figures gathering together the best clothes from the latest collections and artfully composing looks to be shot for glossy magazines, per Business of Fashion.

Click here to read the entire article on Business of Fashion

Timeline of Trump's praise for Putin while Trump Tower Moscow was in the works

President Trump's campaign-season flattery of Russian President Vladimir Putin, a head scratcher at the time, makes a bit more sense after The Washington Post reported Sunday night that Trump's company was working on a deal to build a skyscraper in Moscow, reports the Washington Post.

Click here to read the entire article on the Washington Post

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.