

NEWS BRIEFS

Norway, Architectural Digest, Mulberry and fashion CEOs – News briefs

January 31, 2018

Mulberry wants to continue UK manufacturing despite rising cost. Image credit: Mulberry

---

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Today in luxury:

The country where a luxury Tesla has become the budget option

Marte Skogstad Allgot moved back to Oslo, Norway, from London two years ago and soon found that running a car on gas was prohibitively expensive, per CNBC.

Click here to read the entire article on CNBC

Architectural Digest raises money to build homes in Haiti

It takes a shelter title to raise money for a village: Architectural Digest is partnering with San Francisco-based nonprofit start-up New Story to build a 100-home village in Haiti, WWD reports.

Click here to read the entire article on WWD

Mulberry wants to continue making in the UK despite higher Brexit costs

Handbag maker Mulberry is committed to manufacturing in Britain even as it grapples with higher leather import costs since the Brexit vote, and the company could even consider opening another factory in England, its chief executive said to The Independent.

Click here to read the entire article on The Independent

What makes a great fashion CEO?

In times of turbulent change, leaders must balance quantitative and qualitative strategies with a sharp understanding of the consumer and knack for nailing risks, says Business of Fashion. Click here to read the entire article on Business of Fashion

---

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.