

NEWS BRIEFS

Daywear's death, Breitling, Mercedes-Benz and Ritz-Carlton – News briefs

February 13, 2018

Carolina Herrera's resort 2017 collection

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Today in luxury:

What the death of daywear means for the brands that peddle it

After nearly four decades building her namesake brand into a global symbol of refinement and femininity, Carolina Herrera announced on Friday that her autumn/winter 2018 runway show at the Museum of Modern Art will be her last as her namesake label's creative leader, says Business of Fashion.

Click here to read the entire article on Business of Fashion

Breitling CEO ditched racy ads featuring women as unsuitable

The new chief executive of Switzerland's Breitling watch company said he has ended advertisements with some featuring women in shorts and flight suits catering to pilots of World War II-era fighter planes on grounds they were inappropriate, per Reuters.

Click here to read the entire article on Reuters

Mercedes-Benz is thinking of leaving the Detroit Auto Show

Mercedes-Benz may pull out of the annual North American International Auto Show in Detroit next year, according to people familiar with the matter, as carmakers increasingly choose to unveil new products at tech shows or their own special events, reports Bloomberg.

Click here to read the entire article on Bloomberg

"A Saudi luxury prison": How the kingdom squeezed billions from billionaires

After being summoned by an aide to King Salman on Nov. 4, a prominent Saudi showed up at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Riyadh expecting a royal audience. Instead, armed men took his mobile phone and escorted him to a hotel room, according to the Wall Street Journal.

Click here to read the entire article on the Wall Street Journal

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.