Billed as "Au Soliel, a Summer Soirée," the summer series will reflect Le Méridien's French heritage by allowing guests to experience Mediterranean beach club culture through different activities, including meal and cocktail specials. The luxury hospitality brand has also tapped style blogger Garance Doré as a creative consultant for the summer's programming, asking the influencer to bring her perspective on French lifestyle to consumers.

"We're delighted to be working with Garance," said George Fleck, vice president of global brand marketing and management, Le Méridien. "She and her brand embody an effortless style that is unmistakably Parisian and undeniably global, a chic simplicity with a sense of humor, which complements Le Méridien's brand perfectly."

Under the sun

Programming for Au Soliel, which translates to "under the sun," begins this month. While some Le Méridien locations have special events throughout the season, as a whole, the activities for the summer soirées are meant to capture the laid-back summer spirit.

Guests will be encouraged to try their hand at the board game backgammon or pétanque, a lawn game with its origins in the Côte d'Azur.

A petit plates menu will be introduced at each hotel, including locations in Asia and the Middle East, allowing travelers to savor summer with light meals made with fresh and local ingredients.

Capitalizing on the popularity of rosé, Le Méridien hotels will also be serving rosé cocktails and desserts, such as gelato.

Among the locations hosting special events is the Le Méridien Beach Plaza in Monte Carlo. To celebrate the start of summer, there will be performances by DJ Inès Mélia and Nouvelle Vague. The French band also curated a summer soundtrack for the hospitality brand, which is available on streaming platform Spotify.

In celebration of a savouring the good life... We are delighted to present the official debut of Au Soleil: a Summer Soirée! To mark the summer solstice, the brand's recently renovated location in Tarragona, Spain will serve dinner on the beach with a fireworks display. It will also have a gelato truck for travelers to enjoy.

Mediterranean-themed festivities will also take place at North American Le Méridien locations. The Denver hotel will host a special Bastille Day celebration, as well as drink specials, backgammon and a weekly vintage cinema series.

In Montreal, guests will be able to participate in backgammon tournaments and bicycle tours. The terrace will undergo a Mediterranean style makeover, which includes palm trees, beach umbrellas and vintage throws.

Along with the activations at Le Méridien's properties, the campaign will include a new video series from Ms. Doré. "The Art of Life" will include tips on enjoying life.

Summer fun

Summer Soirées are becoming an annual tradition for Le Méridien, as the hospitality group reflects on its French Rivera roots to inspire their summer programming.

The focus on the brand's French heritage conveys characteristics and ideas that remove anonymity and help Le Méridien to stand out in an always-crowded hospitality sector. Brands with a story and discernible personality tend to make greater impressions on consumers (see story).

"In my experience, there is no other hotel brand that can claim our same rich European heritage, born by Air France at the height of glamorous travel in the late 1960s, early 1970s," Mr. Fleck said. "So we wanted to create a program that at once celebrates this French style and sensibility and the intangible allure of European summers as well as creates a light-hearted and chic way for our guests around the world to engage with the brand."
