Called "That's Rich," the series is inspired by Mr. Saint Laurent's vision of the modern woman as he imagined her. The photo series will be presented at The Selects Gallery and in the Harper's Bazaar September issue.

"Thanks to Kenneth Willardt's acute sense of sharpness and finely structured composition, this series of images epitomizes what beauty and fashion photography is about: a surreal vision of reality, beautified almost to an extreme," said Marie Audier D'Alessandris, founder of The Selects Gallery, in a statement.

That's Rich

Throughout his career, Mr. Saint Laurent helped redefine what the modern woman looked like.

Thanks to his meticulous attention to detail, Mr. Saint Laurent's designs became incredibly popular and influential in the fashion world.

Now, Harper's Bazaar is helping Mr. Willardt to bring this vision to life with a new photo series.

Eight large-format photographs shot by Mr. Willardt will be on display at The Selects Gallery. These photos are inspired by Mr. Saint Laurent and make use of his ideas.

Additionally, the photos will be published in the September issue of Harper's Bazaar.

The campaign comes just a few months after Hearst-owned Harper's Bazaar gained a new editor at large who was previously at The New York Times' style magazine T.

Deborah Needleman ended her four-year tenure at T in late 2016, but her next moves were not made public at the time. While maintaining her new role managing story ideas for Harper's Bazaar, Ms. Needleman will also be giving support to T with a new weekly column in the magazine (see story).
