

NEWS BRIEFS

European luxury, Zegna, private planes and Jaguar – News briefs

October 16, 2018

Most of luxury's growth has been driven by geographic expansion. Image credit: Ermenegildo Zegna

By STAFF REPORTS

Please be aware the clippings below may require a paid subscription to the listed media outlet to read an article in full.

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Today in luxury:

How Europe has become a powerhouse in luxury

In the shadow of Italy's Dolomites mountains sits the Thelios luxury eyewear factory owned by LVMH, says the Financial Times.

Click here to read the entire article on the Financial Times

Ermenegildo Zegna Chinese demand slows due to trade war

The ongoing trade war with the U.S. is hitting Chinese consumers psychologically, causing a slowdown for luxury goods in the second half of the year, said Italian menswear maker Ermenegildo Zegna Group, per Business of Fashion.

Click here to read the entire article on Business of Fashion

Luxury-jet market is so hot that even used planes are selling

Buying a used business jet is getting harder – and that's a sign of a long-awaited shift in the market for luxury planes, reports Bloomberg.

Click here to read the entire article on Bloomberg

Jaguar considers transformation to EV-only brand

Jaguar Land Rover bosses are considering a plan to turn Jaguar into an EV-only brand within the next decade, Autocar has learned.

Click here to read the entire article on Autocar

© 2020 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.