Designer Ryan Korban has designed a special interpretation of the brand, in a room exhibit within the museum. The installment featured special Lalique crystal pieces, even featured on the wall, in the room with an entirely blush hue.

The exhibit room features silk carpeting, velvet, suede and floral walls, custom straw marquetry and cashmere upholstery.

"The space I created is a romantic and modern take on the world of Lalique," Mr. Korban said. "It's monochromatic, blush color palette with backdrop of rose covered walls will introduce this magical brand to a new generation, allowing people to experience the beauty of Lalique in a new and exciting way."

Mr. Korban's installation is also featured with Lalique's Champs-lyes 6 Tier Chandelier, Ginkgo sconces, Cactus table, Rinceaux mirror, Marsan table, Perles d'eau coffee table and a variety of clear crystal vases and bowls.

Beginning with a press preview, the space was open from Nov. 9 to Nov. 12.

In another recent partnership, Lalique demonstrated its savoir-faire alongside Mexican mastery for a collaborative decanter with tequila distiller Patrón.

In 2015, Lalique and Patrón partnered to handcraft the limited-edition Patrón en Lalique: Serie 1 crystal decanter for the distillery's finest aged tequila. Lalique has partnered with a number of brands to extend its relationship with different facets of an affluent consumer's life to ensure that no matter the sector, its brand is part of the conversation (see story).
