The nomads who own fractions of multiple luxury homes

Sean Daly, a retired partner with a major accounting firm, has a lot of practice working with fractions. Now he has used that skill to amass a portfolio of vacation homes in pie-chart slices: one-tenth of a ski home in Vail, one-twelfth of an oceanfront retreat on Hawaii's island of Kauai and one-twelfth of a centuries-old villa in Tuscany. Added together, the three fractional properties which he takes turns using with other fractional owners cost over $1 million, says the Wall Street Journal.
