In the SoHo neighborhood of New York, Chanel has opened its doors to a beauty atelier, which acts as a beauty workshop. Guests can come and explore with Chanel products including makeup, skincare and fragrance, in the space that sticks strictly to the beauty sector.

Beauty on the street

As the beauty industry grows, and along with it personalization and experiences, Chanel is individualizing the in-store experience and allowing anyone to come and play around with its products.

The atelier is encouraging beauty fans to create a profile for the workshop that lives in digital and allows users to explore products through zones based on how she would use the items at home. Users can save products they like and keep track of what they do not through the online profile.

Chanel's platform also allows users to book services at the beauty workshop as well as special events. Shoppers can also checkout through the app at the SoHo location to take their products home right away or have them shipped.

A collection of beauty artists will be on-site, which Chanel is calling its Artists-in-Residence.

Chanel's current schedule of events includes daily makeup happy hours, which include 20 minutes of Champagne and a makeup session for $30.

The new location is located at 120.5 Wooster Street and opened on Jan. 25.

Chanel also recently encouraged consumers to embrace colorful cosmetics in a pop-up event last year.

Open from March 1 through 4, the Los Angeles Chanel Beauty House opened its doors to the public, allowing guests to try out its latest lip products. Increasingly, beauty brands are providing consumers with interactive experiences, taking discovery beyond the traditional counter consultation (see story).
