"Four Seasons is well positioned for continued success in 2019 with the steady and strategic growth of our global portfolio," said Christian Clerc, president of worldwide hotel operations of Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts, in a statement. "Our portfolio continues to grow at a healthy pace, as we focus on projects of the highest quality, in the destinations where our guests want to be.

"We remain committed to offering the very highest standards of hospitality as we expand with a diverse collection of properties, including our entry in Greece and Spain, our first resort set within a world-class vineyard in Napa Valley, and the opening of our first standalone residences in London," he said. "With a continued focus on our residential portfolio, we are solidifying our market position as the world leader in luxury branded residential offerings.

"Eight of the nine new anticipated openings this year include a residential component, affirming the growing importance of branded residences to Four Seasons growth strategy as well as luxury consumers who want to live with our brand and make Four Seasons their home."

In addition to new properties debuting this year, Four Seasons has also announced new resorts and residences to come in later years in areas such as Dalian, China; Makkah, Saudi Arabia; Hanoi, Vietnam and Caye Chapel, Belize.

Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts also announced this year it will be expanding its portfolio of branded residences in Japan with an upcoming opening.

In partnership with the Berjaya Okinawa Development Co. Ltd., Four Seasons is developing a new complex in Okinawa that will feature a resort and residences in a beachfront location. This marks the brand's second residences project in the nation, following the launch of a property in Kyoto (see story).
