The former editor will select her favorite pieces from the Karl Lagerfeld line for what the brand is calling “The Edit by Carine Roitfeld.” The collaboration is one of many for the fashion label, after repositioning nine years ago, and marks the second time working with Ms. Roitfeld.

Collaboration and collections

Women’s Wear Daily has revealed that Ms. Roitfeld previously assisted Karl Lagerfeld in its collaboration with fast-fashion retailer H&M.

The fashion expert is now working with the brand again on a collection that her name will be attached to this time.

Karl Lagerfeld’s eponymous founder has also worked with Ms. Roitfeld on a variety of styling projects.

Only a few wholesale partners will be in on the project, but the collection will be available at Karl Lagerfeld stores and on its ecommerce site.

The collection will span a variety of sectors including women, men, accessories, kids, home goods and jewelry. While Ms. Roitfeld will not design any of the pieces, her personality will shine through, the editor has stated.

“She knows what she wants; she has a vision and she states her vision,” Mr. Lagerfeld said in a statement. “She is actually what she seems to be; she matches her image, she fits in her universe and she is a perfect match for KL.”

Karl Lagerfeld recently extending his eponymous brand into cosmetics with a collection that reflects his playful yet polished aesthetic.

Working with Australian cosmetics company ModelCo, the label has created a 50-piece line that includes products and tools. While Karl Lagerfeld has previously released fragrances, this marks the brand’s first makeup line (see story).
