Singapore co-working reaches next level luxury

The Great Room's co-working space in Singapore's Centennial Tower doesn't look like your average office. The floor is marble, the finishings are brushed gold and there's coconut water in the pantry fridge. It's a step up from the sector's more utilitarian offerings, and the pricing reflects that, says Bloomberg

Garmin's five new luxury MARQ smartwatches cost \$1,500 and up

I don't spend $1,500 on watches, but there are many who do. Garmin's latest line of specialized watches look like they're designed for high-end boutiques, rather than your local running gear store. The newly-announced MARQ line of "tool watches" seem pretty interesting-looking. They're also pretty expensive, says CNET.

Celine's Paris stores show facets of retail concept

Celine has opened two boutiques in Paris as part of a major worldwide retail push, with site-specific designs that illustrate the dual facets of the store concept designed by creative director Hedi Slimane, according to Women's Wear Daily.
