Having never had a marina-front resort before, Four Seasons opens up its new Los Cabos hotel on the less trafficked area of the East Cape for reservations. Four Seasons claims it is redefining the East Cape area, as it has remained untouched for many years.

Marina-front resort

Four Seasons' new resort property includes 18 acres of organic farming land, a spa and wellness facility including 10 treatment rooms and two couples suites, four pools, five dining locations, an 18-hole golf course under the Robert Trent Jones brand, event space, a sports complex, a teen center and a Kids for all Seasons program.

Guerin Glass Architects is responsible for the contemporary design. The facility includes 141 guest rooms, which includes 23 suites.

Four Seasons is also working on its Private Residence area in the resort, allowing longer stays.

The resort will start accepting reservations for Nov. 1, 2019.

Los Cabos' Eastern Cape is located alongside the Sea of Cortez, which is categorized as an UNESCO World Heritage site.

"We are fully prepared that this part of Cabo is about to become the worst best-kept secret in the world," said Borja Manchado, general manager of Four Seasons Los Cabos, in a statement. "Once our guests get a taste of the lifestyle here, I'm quite sure they will begin planning their next visit even before the first one is over."

Los Cabos is proving to be a reinvigorated area, as luxury real estate brokerage Engel & Vlkers celebrated a successful year for its division in the Los Cabos, Mexico area.

Engel & Vlkers Snell Real Estate office announced its 2018 year has been significantly positive for the firm, claiming it was responsible for 70 percent of all Los Cabos sales priced more than $5 million. Since the firm opened 21 years ago in 1997, it has seen $2.1 billion in sales (see story).
