

NEWS BRIEFS

Elsewhere: California, alligator skin, stock market and Warren Buffett spurned Tiffany

January 2, 2020

Napa Valley in California is wine country. Image credit: Visit California

By STAFF REPORTS

Elsewhere in luxury (may require paid subscription):

In California, New Year brings new regulations for businesses

Laws on privacy, classifying independent contractors took effect Jan. 1

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Please click here to read the article on WSJ.com

Alligator skin, human clones and other things being banned in 2020

Jan. 1 is a popular time for new laws to take effect. This year, some states are instituting bans (or trying to), while others are protecting privacy or public safety.

Please click here to read the article on nytimes.com

WWD list: A decade of stock market winners and losers

The winners in the 2010s rode major trends from the rise of ath-leisure to the massive growth in beauty to outsized stock market gains.

Please click here to read the article on WWD.com

Warren Buffett spurned Tiffany as deal drought continued

Berkshire shares underperform as investor passes on big deals, balking at prices.

Please click here to read the article on FT.com

Please click here to read Luxury Daily's Dec. 31, 2019: 6 luxury trends from 2010-19 that will leach into the Twenties
