Tiffany & Co. released a featurette highlighting the jewelry shown in director Kenneth Branagh's new film, Death on the Nile. Among the show-stopping pieces from the jeweler is a recreation of the iconic Tiffany Diamond.

Starring role

Death on the Nile is based on Agatha Christie's 1937 novel of the same name. Its star-studded cast features Mr. Branagh, Gal Gadot, Annette Bening and Armie Hammer.

In the film, Mr. Hammer's character Simon gifts his new bride Linnet, portrayed by Ms. Gadot, the Tiffany Diamond. The film used a recreation of the original necklace, which features a 128.54-carat Fancy Yellow diamond with cushion-cut and round brilliant white diamonds of over 100 total carats.

The featurette shared by Tiffany & Co. teases the film's plot before focusing on the Fancy Yellow diamond's starring role. In a nod to the importance of craftsmanship, brief scenes show jewelry designers working to painstakingly recreate the original which has only be worn by three people in the last century.

Tiffany jewelry is on display in Death on the Nile

The Tiffany Diamond was last worn by Lady Gaga at the 91st Academy Awards (see story).

Other Tiffany pieces in the film include Soleste earrings in platinum and 18k gold with yellow diamonds, a Victoria line bracelet in platinum with diamonds and a Cobblestone diamond band ring. At least 10 pieces from the jeweler will appear on the silver screen.

"With Death on the Nile, I wanted to the visual language to represent the film's time period but also be effortlessly modern," said Paco Delgado, costume designer for Death on the Nile, in a statement. "To me, Tiffany & Co. has always signified a balance of beauty and tradition, mixed with avant-garde and trendsetting modernity."

Select Tiffany & Co. stores, including the New York Fifth Avenue flagship, will promote the film with curations of yellow diamonds and special window displays.
