The house, best known for its jeweled eggs, has unveiled the design for an Imperial Class Faberg Game of Thrones Egg inspired by the fiery character Daenerys Targaryen, portrayed by actor Emilia Clarke. The one-of-a-kind piece was co-designed by Faberg designer Liisa Tallgren and "Game of Thrones" costume designer Michele Clapton.

"Faberg has an unrivalled ability to commemorate significant milestones with its objets d'art, that tell tales of intrigue and mystique," said Josina von dem Bussche-Kessell, global sales and business development director at Faberg, in a statement. "We are delighted to pay tribute to the modern-day legend that is the Game of Thrones series."

Dragon egg

The bespoke jeweled egg, which is still in production, is symbolic of Daenerys' precious dragon eggs.

Inside, the Game of Thrones egg will reveal a miniature version of the crown worn by whoever holds the Iron Throne, complete with a pear-cut ruby responsibly sourced by Gemfields' ruby mine in Mozambique.

When opened, the 18-karat white gold Faberg egg's silhouette will also resemble a dragon spreading its wings. The piece also makes other references to Daenerys, incorporating purple, blue and other colors often associated with the iconic character.

The egg was inspired by Daenerys Targaryen, known as the Mother of Dragons

"Rarely has a story captured the imagination of so many people around the world, and this one-off piece is a once-in-a-lifetime collector's item," Ms. von dem Bussche-Kessell said. "The partnership with Warner Bros. and Michele Clapton showcases Faberg's relevance today by encapsulating the zeitgeist' of storytelling and artistry."

In another notable collaboration, Faberg reinterpreted the Spirit of Ecstasy mascot for British automaker Rolls-Royce in 2018 (see story).

Other luxury brands have also created special releases inspired by "Game of Thrones."

In 2019, Scottish whiskey distiller Johnnie Walker celebrated the show's conclusion with two limited-editions.

Johnnie Walker's limited-edition whisky blends were inspired by two iconic and powerful houses of Westeros, House Stark and House Targaryen. They were successors to 2018's White Walker edition (see story).
