

APPAREL AND ACCESSORIES

Capri Holdings names new senior VP, chief people officer

June 1, 2021

Last year, Versace was the most resilient Capri Holdings label. Image credit: Versace

By LUXURY DAILY NEWS SERVICE

Fashion group Capri Holdings has promoted Jenna A. Hendricks to senior vice president, chief people officer.

Subscribe to Luxury Daily
Plus: Just released
State of Luxury 2019 Save $246 ▶

Ms. Hendricks, who joined Michael Kors more than 17 years ago, most recently served as senior vice president of global human resources. In her new role, Ms. Hendricks will be responsible for leading the global human resources organization for Capri Holdings across all three of its luxury houses to drive innovative solutions ultimately highlighting a talent-centric culture.

"For almost two decades, Jenna has provided strategic leadership to the management team in all aspects of human resources," said John D. Idol, chairman and CEO of Capri Holdings. "Jenna has been an invaluable partner and has helped to shape the global culture at Capri.

"As Capri continues to grow, Jenna's vision for the future of our global employee community will be integral to our success."

Continuing to strive for success

During her time with the group, Ms. Hendricks played a pivotal role in the integration of Jimmy Choo and Versace into Capri Holdings. She also supported the global expansion of the Michael Kors brand.

As a business partner, Ms. Hendricks has also made significant contributions to talent acquisition, employee development and group diversity and inclusion initiatives.

Ms. Hendricks joined Michael Kors more than 17 years ago, most recently serving as senior vice president of global human resources. Image credit: Jenna A. Hendricks

Capri Holdings is currently seeing improvement, despite reporting that revenue was flat in the fourth quarter of 2021 compared to last year. Last week, the group reported that retail sales for the group increased by 13 percent globally, with growth across all three of its houses: Versace, Jimmy Choo and Michael Kors. Ecommerce sales also increased by 80 percent (see story).

Ms. Hendricks is excited to continue contributing to growth.

"I am thrilled to continue to partner with the Capri leadership team as the Company works to further develop our talent and achieve its strategic objectives," she said. "Our employees have always been the heart and soul of our global organization.

"I look forward to advancing workplace initiatives that will further help our team achieve continued success."

© 2021 Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.