The latest resort on the Greek island is aiming to provide guests with idyllic surroundings, rich culture, unparalleled culinary opportunities and more. The resort's design blends Mediterranean style while proposing a feel of harmony for guests.

"The opening of Cosme this summer is an exciting development for Paros and The Luxury Collection brand," said Philipp Wegmann, vice president and global brand leader for The Luxury Collection, in a statement. "The Luxury Collection provides today's global travelers with experiences that are highly immersive and deeply reflective of the destination."

Going Greek

The resort is offering 40 suites, featuring private pools and exclusive views. Each room has custom furniture from Spanish designer Jaime Hayon, with an emphasis on shades of blue, to reflect a color often associated with Greece.

The Cosmos Suite offers guests views of the Aegean Sea.

Travelers will have access to ample Greek food and culture, as Greek chef Yiannis Kioroglou brings his flair to the hotel's dining offerings and multimedia Greek artists will be on display.

Guests will also have access to Elios Spa, which will be offering a breadth of healing rituals, treatments and therapies including the Korres Greek yogurt facial; the Aegean sensation candle massage and more.

The Luxury Collection has included its connections to Greece in its marketing efforts.

Last December, The Luxury Collection announced French model Caroline de Maigret as its newest global explorer with curated city guides from Seville and Paris to Venice and Athens.

Ms. de Maigret collaborated with The Luxury Collection to produce A Night in Seville and the Morning After, a guide to her favorite places to stay, dine and discover (see story).
