The house's latest special edition Chime Zine arrives in collaboration with creative network organization The Meteor. The "22 for 22" edition addresses several cultural conversations including the war in Ukraine, racial injustice, LGBTQ rights and more.

Gucci for good

With colorful and inviting aesthetics balanced with content from some of the most prominent female change-makers in the world, the latest zine from Gucci continues to deliver.

The latest issue puts forth pieces revolving around the words and experiences of 22 writers, activists, artists and more. The zine continues spotlighting the group who appeared at the "22 for 22: Visions for a Feminist Future" summit in May.

With each passing zine, Gucci continues to give voices to underrepresented and those who are working to make the world a better and more equitable place.

In 2020, Gucci's Chime for Change initiative released an earlier issue of its digital zine focusing on gender equality.

Chime Zine Issue N.2 included contributions from 16 artists, who touch on subjects such as women and girls with disabilities, intersectional feminism, trans dating, refugees, female genital mutilation (FGM) and child marriage. It also includes a spotlight on Japan, inspired by women of Bluestocking (Seito), Japan's first feminist literary journal (see story).
