Hospitality group Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts is teaming up with a travel rewards leader.

The brand is now added to the second party's Luxury Hotel and Resort Collection. As a result, Sapphire Reserve cardmembers can enjoy experiences and exclusive perks at the brand's properties around the world, just ahead of the holiday jet-setting season.

"Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts is as dedicated to delivering an exceptional travel experience for its customers as we are," said Jason Wynn, CEO of Chase Travel for JPMorgan Chase & Co., in a statement.

"We could not be more thrilled to offer these world-class, hand-selected properties into our distinctive hotel program for our Chase Sapphire Reserve cardmembers," Mr. Wynn said. "This enhancement demonstrates our commitment to further expand our luxury product offerings and deliver exceptional travel benefits, at-scale."

Vamped up vacations

Thanks to the addition of Four Seasons, Chase Sapphire Reserve cardmembers will be treated to curated stays at the 118 luxury properties, as well as access to elite benefits.

The program is comprised of a network of prestige resorts and hotels throughout 360 international markets, and continues to grow. According to Chase, Four Seasons is now the biggest brand in the lineup.

Members who book participating stays can expect complimentary benefits on the property such as a $100 credit that can be used for dining, spa treatments and other hotel activities.

A daily breakfast for two, room upgrades when available, early check-ins and late check-outs, and free Wi-Fi is also among the draws.

Four Seasons's move comes during an eventful year for the hospitality group, recently re-upping a popular campaign (see story) and announcing that it will be making its debut in the Dominican Republic by 2026 (see story).
