French fashion house Celine has revamped its boutique in the “305.”

The maison’s Miami Design District flagship is now open following renovations. Curated by creative director Hedi Slimane, the storefront is now in line with Celine’s updated retail aesthetic, as first seen at its Madison Avenue boutique in 2019.

Artistic implementation

The two-floor flagship has a whole new look, thanks to contributions from these contemporaries and the vision of Mr. Slimane. Inside, a sleek, modern approach to interior design is on display.

Open space and natural elements define the 4,000-square-foot location. Core materials such as Roman lava stone, antique marble, reclaimed oak and gray travertine are used throughout.

The site also serves as a furniture exhibition, filled with units from Mr. Slimane, and is home to artworks from a variety of creatives.

Pieces from six artists total paintings from celebrated Syrian-American artist Simone Fattal line the walls while a sculpture by American interdisciplinary artist Antonia Kuo stands tall are on view, the entire store unveiled to the public during Miami Art Week in December 2023. This event included, Miami's Design District has proved to be a hotbed for luxury retail.

French fashion house Dior's third men's store, which popped up in August 2023, now sits just a block away from Celine's art-filled emporium (see story).
