

TRAVEL AND HOSPITALITY

Four Seasons Yachts charts course ahead of inaugural season

March 27, 2024

Massive suites await seafaring travelers. Image credit: Four Seasons

---

By LUXURY DAILY NEWS SERVICE

Luxury hospitality group Four Seasons' yacht division is revealing details on its maiden voyage.

With its first yacht currently under construction in Ancona, Italy, 10 trips are planned to occur during the debut 2026 season. A joint venture between luxury yachting company Marc-Henry Cruise Holdings Ltd., Italian shipbuilder Fincantieri and the hospitality staple, the first batch of pilgrimages will span 30 countries and more than 130 locations around the globe.

"We are excited to showcase the breathtaking destinations and world-class design awaiting guests aboard Four Seasons Yachts as we approach our inaugural season in 2026," said Alejandro Reynal, president and CEO of Four Seasons, in a statement.

"At Four Seasons, guest-centricity has always been the foundation of our luxury service offering and our exceptional yacht will extend this approach to the seas," Mr. Reynal said. "Our teams are dedicated to innovating and delivering genuine service, ensuring each journey is defined by comfort, elegance, and personalization, setting a new standard for luxury hospitality experiences at sea."

Comfort and the Caribbean

Traveling in style, as well as with the most luxurious accommodations, is top of mind for Four Seasons Yachts creative director Prosper Assouline and design firm Tillberg Design of Sweden.

Providing 50 percent more living space per guest than any other competitor in the space, according to Four Seasons, each of the 95 "meticulously crafted" suites will feature floor-to-ceiling windows, panoramic views, private terraces, double-vanity bathrooms and elegant interiors.

The Loft Suite can accommodate up to 20 guests. Image credit: Four Seasons

Modular walls allow for different combinations of amenities, as well as for large groups to stay together, with it being possible to reserve an entire side of a deck, measuring more than 13,000 square feet of space.

“Our goal was to craft an environment that feels both familiar and extraordinary, with warm hues and open designs,” said Fredrik Johansson, partner and executive director of Tillberg Design of Sweden, in a statement.

“We are creating an inviting, welcoming environment that reflects the same feeling one experiences at a Four Seasons hotel or resort,” Mr. Johansson said. “At the same time, we are designing a look and feel that is unique to this project, creating an elegant yet simple interior that stands out on its own, while blending beautifully with the majestic seas that will surround it.”

Alongside plenty of living arrangements, the yacht also offers 11 dining options, a spa and wellness area, a state-of-the-art marina and one of the largest stern pools in the industry measuring 65 feet long and 18 feet wide.

The premier signature Funnel Suite is the largest aboard the vessel, spanning four floors. Image credit: Four Seasons

Its first venture is set to begin in January 2026, beginning in the Caribbean and traveling throughout the region through March of the same year. Following that trip, Mediterranean voyages will begin later that month, sailing through Croatia, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Greece and more.

A waitlist to join the hospitality company on its inaugural voyage is live now.

Four Seasons announced this new business venture in 2022, with the original plan to launch in 2025 (see story).