Italian fashion house Dolce & Gabbana is leaning into the world of sweet treats with its latest releases.

In collaboration with Sicily-based pastry business Fiasconaro, the brand is bringing back a selection of various flavors of Colomba, a traditional Italian Easter dessert. Pairing its partner's confectionery expertise with Dolce & Gabbana's high-end design prowess, the collection comes in a tin box crafted by local artisans.

Holiday delight

A partnership that dates back years, this year's edition of the treats comes in three flavors: Sicilian Almond, Chocolate with Wild Strawberry Jam from Sicily and Mandarin Essence.

The pastries come in elliptical or rectangular tins, depending on the size one orders coming in 750-gram or 1-kilogram formats. On the containers is a Sicilian majolica pattern, tying into Dolce & Gabbana's Mediterranean flair seen in their homeware and apparel collections.

#DolceGabbana and #Fiasconaro unveil a new chapter of pastry artistry. Crafted with precision and delicately housed within the brand's iconic #DGMaiolica tin packaging, embodying the essence of #DGFattoAMano.

New to this Easter's drop is a pink variant of the design, said to represent the seasonal blooms of cherry, almond and peach trees. Also added to the collection is La Colombina, a traditional Italian candy that has flavors of almonds, mandarin and various candied fruits with pistachios sprinkled on top.

A selection of spreads pistachio, almond and chocolate has also been released for the holiday-themed drop.

Available now, both online and in-store, the Dolce & Gabbana Fiasconaro selection varies in price from $60 for the 750-gram

Colomba size, to $99 for a four-pack of La Colombina.

Other maison's have been exemplifying their confectionery and candy prowess in recent months, with French fashion house Louis Vuitton (see story) and LVMH-owned perfumer Acqua di Parma (see story) opening dessert pop-ups.
