Dallas-based luxury department store Stanley Korshak is welcoming new ownership.

American high-end specialty retailer Mitchells Stores has purchased Stanley Korshak for an undisclosed sum, expanding the independent high-end company's store count to nine across the United States. Crawford Brock, who bought the Texas staple in 2002 following 15 years of managing the location, will remain onboard following the acquisition.

"This partnership will open up an expanded universe of world-class product, inventory, technology and services to our customers," said Mr. Brock, in a statement.

"I am thrilled to join with my longtime friends, the Mitchells, to launch an exciting new era for our stores and customers."

Brick-and-mortar

With the purchase, Mitchells Stores gains a foothold in the Texan market, expanding its presence outside of its previously established locations across California, Oregon, Washington, Connecticut and New York.

In addition to the 50,000-square-foot, multi-floor flagship in uptown Dallas, the retailer will also take over Stanley Korshak's separate full-service bridal salon.

"Stanley Korshak is a jewel in Texas and we will do everything to help Crawford and his team continue to offer world-class products and services that are perfectly tailored to the Dallas customers," said Chris Mitchell, owner of Mitchells Stores, in a statement.

The opportunity for local growth likely looms large over the acquisition, as fellow luxury department store Neiman Marcus' Dallas flagship is set to shutter at the end of the month following its buy-out by rival Saks Global (see story).
