Richemont-owned Milanese footwear brand Gianvito Rossi is honoring the arts as the Winter Olympics move forward.

The label is the main sponsor of "Desporo Space to Space - The Creation of Memory," an exhibition at Milan's The Bagatti Valsecchi Museum, created in collaboration with Italy's Museum of Modern and Contemporary Art of Trento and Rovereto. The show, on view until Aug. 2, 2026, considers the connections between Italian barons and brothers Fausto and Giuseppe Bagatti Valsecchi and Italian Futurist painter and writer Fortunato Deporo.

Time and space

Established in the late 19th century, the show is on view at Bagatti Valsecchi, a Neo-Renaissance house museum. The building, preserved over centuries, now features the "Space to Space" exhibition, opened Feb. 13.

The show mixes items from the Valsecchi brothers' collection with artworks from Mr. Deporo; more than 40 from the 1930s to 1950s were sourced from the Casa d'Arte Futurista Deporo and the Mart in Trento and Rovereto collections.

Mr. Deporo's artwork is placed within the residential space, allowing visitors to observe the parallels between the three visionary thinkers. The exhibition includes an auditory component, with some of the rooms playing music created by Italian composer

Gaetano Cappa.

Italian curator Nicoletta Boschiero and Italian historian and art critic Antonio D'Amico curated the exhibition.

In April, Gianvito Rossi named Costanzo Ruocco, the company's chief operating officer, CEO (see story).
