

NEWS BRIEFS

Bulgari, Real Estate, Indian luxury market and the fiscal cliff – News briefs

January 2, 2013

By STAFF REPORTS

Today in luxury marketing:

Sign up now
Luxury Daily

Italian tax police targets jeweler Bulgari: report

Italian police have carried out checks at Rome jeweller Bulgari to assess whether the group owned by French luxury conglomerate LVMH regularly declared income tax in Italy, a newspaper reported, per Reuters.

Click here to read the entire story on Reuters

The sport of tycoons

It was a year of record-high sales for luxury real estate. But 2012 will also enter the books for its chart-topping listings, as sellers sought to ride the wave of irrational exuberance for trophy properties, The New York Times reports.

Click here to read the entire story on the New York Times

Luxury product sites expand offerings to boost business

Ecommerce startups targeted at buyers of luxury products are expanding and diversifying their product range as they try to attract more customers to a still nascent market, according to Bloomberg Businessweek.

Click here to read the entire story on Bloomberg Businessweek

Signs of negative economic impact growing

Even if lawmakers manage to avoid most of the $500 billion in tax increases and spending cuts set to take effect this week, the risks to the U.S. economy have risen as consumers and investors recoil from Washington's latest budget spectacle, per the Wall Street Journal.

Click here to read the entire story on the Wall Street Journal

© Napean LLC. All rights reserved.

Luxury Daily is published each business day. Thank you for reading us. Your feedback is welcome.